

WOLKER

WOLKER is the band of Gert-Jan Loobuyck from Ghent. Gert-Jan is self-taught. As a child he learns to play the drums and the piano on his own. By the age of ten he is a guitarist in his very first band. Still, it isn't until Gert-Jan hits his teens that he discovers his true calling in the recording of music. With limited possibilities and limitless patience he learns how to perfect the sound and acoustics of a recording in a creative manner.

Wolker takes an atypical approach to making music: drawing inspiration from the likes of Johann Johansson, Olafur Arnalds and Son Lux, he thrives on feeling and atmosphere, he builds tension and creates a dynamic with a slightly melancholic undertone. Indie acts such as Radiohead, Alt-J or Local Natives also have their place in Wolker's universe, as illustrated by Situations, a triumphant indie pop anthem recorded, mixed and mastered from start to finish in Wolker's own bedroom. The same thing goes for the video and the artwork.

Talking Minds is new proof of Wolker's enormous talent: edgy and melodic, catchy and ingenious at the same time. The superior rolling outro is the coup de grace.

In 2019, drummer Femke Decoene (The Very Very Danger, Juniper) joins the project and makes the final puzzle pieces fall into one. Femke is the right woman in the right place. With her, Wolker evolves from a 'one-man-bedroom project' to a real band, with its own sound and own face. Moreover and at once, the duo also impresses live on stage, so it looks that the sky is the limit for this extraordinary duo.
